(November 4, 1896 — June 14, 1971)

CARLOS P. GARCIA

(November 4, 1896—June 14, 1971)

"LIFE is what you make it. With the necessary consequences of your good deeds, you build the ladder by which rung by rung you climb to sublime destiny or as necessary effect of your wrong or bad acts, you build the dungeon of your own life's imprisonment or bondage. There is no escape from the universal law of cause and effect. You always reap what you sow."

Thus Carlos P. Garcia expressed his philosophy of life and thus has he lived and patterned his career. For Carlos P. Garcia of Talibon, Bohol, started as a public school teacher and rose to the highest position within the gift of his people—the presidency of the Republic of the Philippines.

Starting his public career as a public school teacher, President Garcia had been for six years the representative of the third district of Bohol; nine years as Governor of Bohol; and Senator for three terms from 1941 to 1953. He was the only senator who served in the Senate for three successive terms without interruption from 1941 until his election to the vice-presidency of the Republic. He had been minority floor leader in the Senate since 1946; the only three-term governor of Bohol and only senator who had been steadily voted by the Press as the most outstanding and most useful since 1949 through 1953 without interruption.

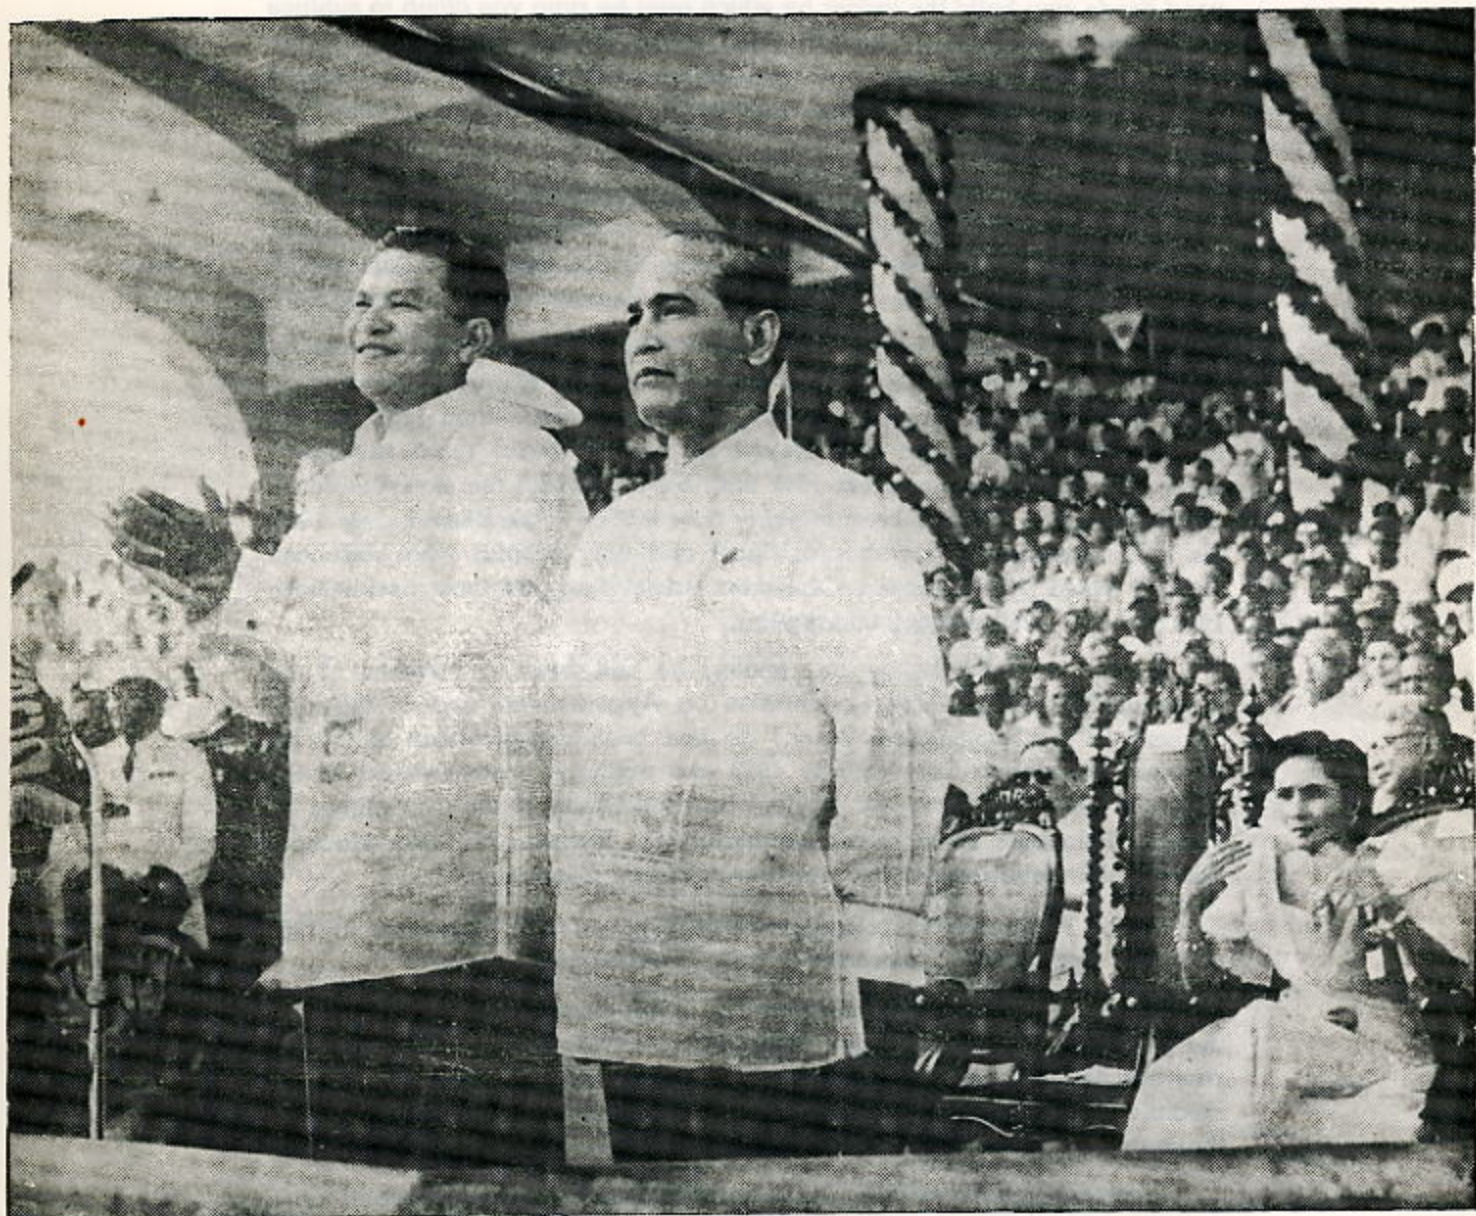

During his incumbency as senator, he had been a member of the Electoral Tribunal and the Commission on Appointments and of the high councils of the Nacionalista Party. He had been vice-president of the NP National Directorate from 1947 to 1953 and executive vice-president of the NP since 1954. As a senator, he had been chairman of the Committees on Foreign Relations, Government Reorganization, Revision of Laws, National Defense, Mindanao and Sulu, and the Advisory Committee.

Carlos P. Garcia was elected vice-president of the Philippines in 1953 and was appointed concurrently secretary of foreign affairs.

Ramon Magsaysay's tragic death in 1957 placed Carlos P. Garcia in the presidency in what maybe considered a distinct disadvantage . . . he was succeeding a tremendously popular leader. But President Garcia immediately set to task in uniting the nation behind his leadership and was thereafter, in 1957, elected to the presidency in his own right.

President Garcia clearly and unpretentiously considered himself as a caretaker at the start of his own term. There was no proclamation of great changes, whether political, social, or economic. It soon became apparent that the statesman in him was more compelling than his modesty, for in mid-term, President Garcia had enunciated and implemented what has been known as the Filipino First Policy.

This nationalistic policy, administered through the Central Bank, gave a tremendous boost to Filipino economic enterprise, and one of its immediate consequences was the establishment of the first fully Filipino oil firm. It was a policy, however, that was discontinued when President Garcia lost his bid for a second term.

History will most likely remember the Filipino First Policy as President Garcia's great contribution to national development.

Before his death on June 14, 1971 Carlos P. Garcia had just been elected President of the Constitutional Convention, to which he would have lent the same humility, sagacity and courage that had distinguished his life both as a man and as a public figure. The Presidency of the Constitutional Convention was, according to general observations, a vindication of Carlos P. Garcia. But it is safe to say that Carlos P. Garcia never needed any vindication. He was, to the very last, a gentleman in public service.

Among other high positions, President Garcia had been missioner to Washington for the Philippine Rehabilitation and War Damage Claims (1945); delegate to the World Conference at San Francisco (1945) to draft the Charter of the United Nations; cited among the few Filipinos in the World's Biographical Encyclopedia and the WHO IS WHO of the United States; delegate to the Interparliamentary Union Conference at Dublin, Ireland (1950); delegate to the SEA (Southeast Asia) Baguio Conference (1950); chairman, Philippine Delegation to the Geneva Conference in 1954 for Korean Unification; presiding officer of the SEATO Conference in Manila (1954) that produced the Manila Treaty and the Pacific Charter; chairman of the Philippine delegation to the SEATO Conference in Pakistan (1956); chairman of the Philippine delegation to the SEATO Conference at Canberra, Australia (1957).

A lawyer by profession, the President passed the bar in 1923 among the ten topnotchers in spite of illness. He finished his law course at the Philippine Law School in 1923, graduating as valedictorian. Since his primary grades, he had always been at the head of his class. During his college days, he had been winner of Malcolm's four-year law course scholarship prizes and also of oratorical contests. He was generally hailed as the Prince of Visayan poets living.

The hardest and most perilous days of his life were those during the Japanese occupation. He was hunted for three consecutive years by the Japanese soldiers for his spurning the order to surrender in May, 1942. A prize was fixed on his head by the ministry of interior but he fearlessly stuck to his decision not to surrender. On three occasions he was cornered by Japanese soldiers but he escaped capture. He was shipwrecked in September, 1942, while trying to escape capture by the Japanese but he survived with his father. He had been in the "Wanted List" of one of the rival guerrilla factions of Leyte before Colonel Ruperto Kangleon took command of the Leyte Guerrilla. In December, 1943, a letter from President Manuel L. Quezon, then in Washington, reached Bohol confirming and approving the civil government of Bohol organized during the Japanese occupation with Carlos P. Garcia as high adviser.

Born on November 4, 1896, President Garcia married Leonila Dimataga of Opon, Cebu, by whom he has one daughter—Mrs. Linda Garcia-Campos. The President's father was Policronio Garcia who had been mayor of Talibon for four terms. His mother's name was Ambrosia Polestico. Mrs. Leonila D. Garcia is a pharmacist by profession having graduated from the College of Pharmacy of the University of Santo Tomas.

The President had attended the Talibon Elementary School, Cebu High School, Silliman University and the Philippine Law School. His diversions and pastimes include playing chess, swimming and reading. His favorite books and authors include philosophy, poetry, history, economics (English and Spanish); Shakespeare, Bacon, Plato, Aristotle, Cervantes, Ingersoll, Vargas Vila and others.

He has travelled all over the Philippines and abroad, sojourning for some time in the United States, England, Ireland, France, Switzerland, Belgium, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Thailand, Vietnam, Pakistan and Australia.

RESOLUTION NO. 7

RESOLUTION OF CONDOLENCE OVER THE DEATH
OF PRESIDENT CARLOS P. GARCIA OF THE
1971 CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

WHEREAS, on June 14, 1971 the Honorable Carlos P. Garcia suddenly died of a heart attack at his residence in Bohol Avenue, Quezon City, Philippines, barely 72 hours after his historic election and assumption of the Presidency of this Constitutional Convention;

WHEREAS, by the untimely demise of its President this Convention has lost a beloved leader, and the Filipino nation, a true Filipino, an outstanding statesman, a sincere and patriotic citizen and a true servant of his people;

WHEREAS, our beloved President had devoted a great part of his 74 years in selfless, dedicated and sincere service to our country and people as a teacher, Representative, Governor, Senator, Vice President and later President of the Republic, and finally as President of this Convention;

WHEREAS, notwithstanding his recurrent heart ailment and against the advice of his physician President Garcia heeded the clamor of his constituents to run as a Delegate to the Convention declaring that this would be "my final act of service to our people";

WHEREAS, in President Garcia are embodied and enshrined the very virtues and sterling qualities which this Convention seeks to inculcate in our people — a passionate love of country, sincerity of purpose, devotion to duty, courage of conviction, spirit of sacrifice, sobriety, honesty and integrity, selfless dedication, nobility and humility;

WHEREAS, although this Convention and the Filipino people have suffered an irreparable loss in the untimely death of Carlos P. Garcia, poet, philosopher, guerrilla leader, outstanding statesman and a true Filipino, nevertheless his colleagues in this Convention will forever consider him as an inexhaustible fountain of inspiration in their herculean and awesome task of adopting a Constitution which to him should embody and give realization to the "fondest hopes, cherished ideals and highest aspirations of our people;"

WHEREAS, the greatest honor which the Delegates can render unto their departed leader is to answer his plea for unity, which in fact his sudden death has accomplished because of their common grief, and his stirring call for sursum corda — to lift our hearts in selfless and dedicated service to God, country and people;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE 1971 CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF THE PHILIPPINES IN SESSION ASSEMBLED:

That, deeply and profoundly mourning the irreparable loss of its dear President, Carlos P. Garcia, it offers, as it hereby offers, its sincerest condolence and deepest sympathy to his family;

MESSAGES OF CONDOLENCE

PRESIDENT FERDINAND E. MARCOS

The death of President Carlos P. Garcia leaves a deep wound upon the entire Filipino nation.

He died in the highest service to the nation, presiding over the sovereign effort to rewrite a Filipino Constitution for the Filipino people. That his life should end at the beginning of this great effort makes our loss even greater, for now we can only miss the sobriety, patience, dedication and wisdom that were among the greatest qualities of the man.

As President of the Republic, he fought for the primacy of Filipino interests, embodying his credo in his famous "Filipino First" doctrine.

As President of the convention, he vowed to give to the convention the full maturity and wisdom of his efforts in rewriting a Constitution that will be this nation's covenant with the future.

On his death, the Filipino nation lost a true statesman and leader, a Filipino whose greatest passion concerned, first and last, the well-being of the Filipino nation.

VICE PRESIDENT FERNANDO LOPEZ

President Garcia's death was a tragic loss to the nation. For our people are passing through confused times and his noble, selfless and dedicated services were urgently needed.

His election as President of the Constitutional Convention made him the symbol of unity of a people divided by ideological and partisan strife. There was hope among the many that the new Constitution and the leadership it would inspire would put an end to the debilitating and almost suicidal struggles that daily consume the energies of our people and blind them to visions of greatness ahead. And this hope was mainly because of the realization that the new Constitution would bear the imprint of the statesmanship, the experience, the patriotism, and mental honesty of President Garcia.

He realized all this, and against the counsel of loved ones that his already frail health would be further endangered, he accepted the challenge of seeking the leadership of the Convention. His work ended before it began. But if he did not complete the rewriting of the Constitution, he performed perhaps a greater task—provided us the example of a public servant whose first sacrifice in the pursuit of national welfare is himself. He loved his people more than himself and his example should begin to bother our collective and individual consciences.

SENATE PRESIDENT GIL J. PUYAT

Few Filipinos have been given the opportunity for service to the people as the late President Carlos P. Garcia. He was elected by the people of Bohol as their congressman and governor. The country voted him Senator, Vice President and President. A few days before his death he was elected President of the Constitutional Convention of 1971. All of these positions or distinctions were given to him by the people because the people felt he was a Filipino who, when given a task consistently performed ably and with dedication. And even though he was given the opportunity to serve in various positions of distinction, one characteristic of the late President Garcia was that he never lost the common touch. He was his usual humble person, approachable and a friend of all. I knew him since I was a student in my elementary grade and he was taking up law. He was boarding in one of my father's houses in Intramuros.

The people will long remember, and I hope will never forget, Garcia the nationalist. His loyalty to his party should be an example to many contemporary politicians. It will always be a matter of conjecture for all of us whether destiny was kind to him or not when he died a few days after his election as President of the Constitutional Convention of 1971. One thing we are sure of, if he would have lived to complete his last mission, he would have done so as a true Filipino and as a dedicated and patriotic public servant, two attributes that characterized his entire career.

SPEAKER CORNELIO T. VILLAREAL

Please accept our heartfelt sympathy for you and your family in your loss, which is so great that no words can express what Mrs. Villareal and I wish to say. We can only send you our love and hope that you and your beloved family will be given strength to bear your sorrow bravely.

You lost a beloved husband. I lost a friend, but the country has lost a good man, a great leader, and a great Filipino.

From a humble school teacher, he rose to the highest position within the gift of our people. He was a real nationalist, but a brother to every man. His life was full of deeds, and because of this, and many more, his memory will live long and forever in the hearts of our people.

Mrs. Villareal and my children join me in sending you our love and sympathy.

CHIEF JUSTICE ROBERTO CONCEPCION

President Carlos P. Garcia died as he had lived—in the service of his people. A grateful nation grieves his untimely demise, for his passing is, indeed, a tragic, irreparable loss. In these times of turmoil, we needed his wisdom and patience, his sense of direction and equanimity, his serene fortitude and steadfast adherence to the Rule of Law, his spirit of dedication to the commonweal and abiding faith in the Divine Providence. May his memory shine through the years as a beacon light to all his countrymen, whom he loved so much.

FORMER PRESIDENT DIOSDADO MACAPAGAL

The demise of President Carlos P. Garcia is an incalculable loss to the Convention and to the nation. Twice it has been my privilege to contend with him for exalted posts. I defeated him for the presidency in 1961, and I came to have genuine esteem for him when I came to know him more thereafter. He defeated me for the presidency of the Convention but I was not sorry because I felt that he deserved the honor and responsibility.

The Convention will miss him but it will draw inspiration from the brief but splendid role that he had played. He was the Convention's hope for unity; now his memory is our symbol of dignity, decency and duty. By his untimely passing, we now realize the magnitude and nobility of things he stood for, and remembering him. We hope to rise above petty bickerings and place the national interest as the sole object of our Convention.
